

MURRAY Clan Society of North America

www.clanmurray.org

Murray of Athol

Murray of Tullibardine

CREST: On a Wreath Or and Sable a demi-savage Proper wreathed about the temples and waist with laurel, his arms extended and holding in the right hand a dagger, in the left a key all Proper

MOTTO: Furth Fortune and Fill the Fetters
(Go onward with fortune and fill the shackles (leg irons))

SEPTS: Balneaves, Dinsmore, Dunsmore, Fleming, Moray, Murrie, Murry, Neaves, Piper, Pyper, Smail, Smale, Small, Smeal, Spalding. Note that there are additional spelling variations of the above surnames.

A SHORT HISTORY:

The Murray's trace their heritage back to the 12th Century and take their name from the great province of Moray, once a local kingdom. It was during this time that the Flemish lords crossed the North Sea and established themselves in the Scottish Rev 2/17 realm. Among them was Freskin, son of Ollec. Either Freskin or his son William intermarried with the ancient royal house of Moray. The senior line of the Murray's took the surname of Sutherland and became Earls of Sutherland in 1235. Thereafter, the chiefs of the Murray's were the Lords of Petty in Moray, who also became Lords of Bothwell in Clydesdale before 1253. An heir of this line, Sir Andrew Murray was the brilliant young general who, along with William Wallace, led the Scots in 1297 in their first uprising against the English conquerors. He was mortally wounded while winning his famous victory at Stirling Bridge. His son, Sir Andrew Murray, 4th Lord of Bothwell, 3rd Regent of Scotland, married Christian Bruce, a sister of King Robert the Bruce. He was captured at Roxburgh early in 1333 and was a prisoner in England at the time of the battle of Halidon Hill. He obtained his freedom in time to march to the relief of his wife, who was bravely defending Kildrummy Castle. Sir Andrew commenced with unabated spirit to struggle in the cause of independence and died in 1338. The last Murray Lord of Bothwell died in 1360 of the plague.

MURRAY Clan Society of North America

CONTACT INFORMATION:

Website:

www.clanmurray.org

Membership:

William Murray
1001 Cordero Cres
Campbell River, BC, V9H 0C3
250-923-5729

bill_murray472@msn.com

Delegate to CASSOC:

William Murray
1001 Cordero Cres
Campbell River, BC, V9H 0C3
250-923-5729

bill_murray472@msn.com

